

Relive the magic of many a Hollywood blockbuster in this versatile Czech city

IT HAS passed off as Zurich, London and even Israel. You’ve seen Tom Cruise race through its streets, and Vin Diesel knock thugs off its bridges.

Prague is a film-maker’s dream. Like a versatile actor, its landmarks and edifices evoke the look and feel of other metropolises.

And it’s affordable. Sandwiched between Austria and Germany in the Czech Republic, Prague is often a cheap alternative to its pricey neighbours, yet its style and history allow it to saunter elegantly just like any other western European capital.

Dubbed the “City of a Hundred Spires”, the Czech capital is renowned for its dramatic skyline, fairytale castles and medieval towers. Downtown Prague, meanwhile, is a gleaming modern centre. The eclectic combination makes the city an ideal setting for a variety of films — from contemporary to historical, to action — which a tour of film locations in Prague amply shows.

Doesn’t the Astronomical Clock at Old Town Square resemble a scene out of The Brothers Grimm?

OLD TOWN SQUARE
I joined a group of film fans in the city’s historic centre to relive famous movie scenes shot here. The Old Town Square, which encompasses baroque churches and the crowd-pulling Astronomical Clock, resembled a setting from a Grimm Brothers’ fairytale.

“Many Hollywood movies were filmed in Prague,” said our guide as he led us past alfresco cafes and fountains. “The Brothers Grimm, Blade II and Mission Impossible, among the most famous ones. You’ve also seen it posing as other cities, such as Amsterdam’s red-light district in horror film Hostel, and a stand-in for 1900s Vienna in The Illusionist.”

Right where we stood, the gothic steeple of Tyn church was the setting of action movie xxx’s opening scene. We continued along Celetna Street to follow the movie’s trail to Obecní dum, the Municipal House. Glittering with colourful mosaic tiles and a golden facade, the art nouveau edifice was the backdrop for Vin Diesel’s lunch scene with actress Asia Argento.

a couple of Swiss policemen.
Meanwhile, the exterior of the nearby Lichtenstein Palace was passed off as the American Embassy in Mission Impossible. Visitors who venture beyond the doors will see lavish rooms and grand views. Indeed, the palace has a glorious history, having hosted prominent personalities such as Queen Elizabeth II.

CHARLES BRIDGE

Weaving through dramatic architecture and rows of restaurants, we made our way to the city’s emblematic Charles Bridge. The bridge that spans Vltava River was flooded with tourists rubbing its legendary sculptures for good luck, street artists selling paintings and performers strutting their stuff.

“An important scene in Mission Impossible was filmed at this spot,” our guide pointed out. “This was where Jon Voight was seen falling off the bridge into the Vltava River.” Directing our gaze towards the river bank, he added: “That’s Kampa Island, where Tom Cruise’s car exploded.

KAMPA ISLAND

We walked over to the island, traversing the “Devil’s Stream” that connected it to Central Prague. A natural islet formed by Vltava River, Kampa Island is often referred to as the “Venice of Prague” by locals who go there on weekends to enjoy the sun.

Kampa Park doubled as a Zurich site in the blockbuster The Bourne Identity. It was there that Matt Damon’s character discovered his lightning quick reflexes by flooring
